

Excitement around today's total solar eclipse has been sweeping the U.S., and nowhere more than the Lloyd's own Cincinnati area, which is very near the eclipse's path of totality. Top off your eclipse-watching with a nature hike on Saturday, and get in a(nother) visit to our Flora Mania exhibition!

Astronomy at the Lloyd?

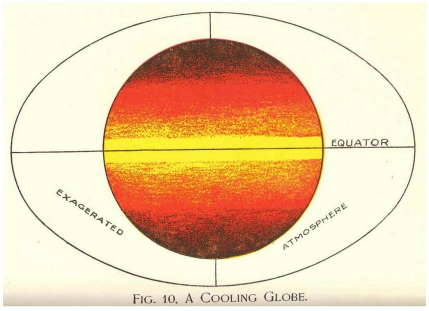

FIG. 10. A COOLING GLOBE.

If today's eclipse has you looking upwards, the Lloyd's collections may not be the first thing on your mind. However, a surprising number of items in our collections have a connection to astronomy, especially from a historical perspective. One such book with both a memorable image (pictured) and title is George W. Tinsley's 1900 work Untrodden Fields, or, Absolute Motion and its Application to Celestial and Terrestrial Physics.

Walking with Wildflowers at Buttercup Valley

Flora Mania Extends Run to April 26

Due to popular demand, we have extended the run of our current exhibition Flora Mania to April 26. If you haven't experienced Flora Mania yet, it's a flower-focused journey through several centuries of botanical illustration. Stop in for one last look or bring a friend or family member for the final month!
