LLOYD LIBRARY & MUSEUM

The leaves are falling here in Cincinnati, and we're excited for our final program to accompany The Lore of the Pawpaw exhibition. With just three weeks left in its run, there's still time to stop in and see photography, specimens, and rare books--all documenting this fantastic native fruit!

Pawpaws from Appalachia to Europe and Back

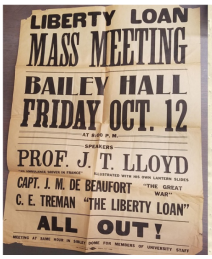

When: Wednesday, November 13, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Virtual Program

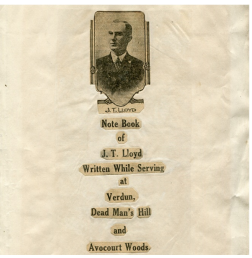

Take a journey with Ohio University professor Robert Brannan as he describes his research pathway from here to Europe on the growth of pawpaws trees on both continents. Learn about his international connections and their recent updates on different cultivars of Ohio's state native fruit.

Registration required.

Happy Veterans Day

The Lloyd extends remembrance and support in acknowledgement of Veterans Day on November 11. We'd like to share two items from our archives, both from the collection of John Thomas Lloyd, World War I veteran and son of library founder John Uri Lloyd. The younger Lloyd traveled to wartime France and served in the ambulance corps. Pictured here are a poster featuring Lloyd as a speaker for a Liberty Loan meeting at Cornell University, and the cover of his notebook kept during the war. We salute our veterans and thank them for their service.

Book Lovers' Best Cities Highlights Lloyd

You never know where the Lloyd will show up "in the wild." According to research by Explore.com, the Lloyd's hometown of Cincinnati ranked among the top 10 best cities for book lovers. The article mentioned the Lloyd by name, along with bibliophile-friendly stats for the Queen City like 2.51 libraries and 2.06 bookstores per 10,000 people, a higher bookstore ratio than New York, Pittsburgh and St. Louis. Of course, books are just the tip of the iceberg at the Lloyd--stop in to visit our exhibition, explore our programming, or find a unique gift in our gift shop!
