We thank all who attended the last open week of Pick Your Poison! With fall right around the corner, we're gearing up with new programs and a new exhibition, The Lore of the Pawpaw. Between a virtual program, opening reception, and walking tour, there's plenty to do in the coming weeks at the Lloyd.

Lessons in the Jardin du Roi

When: September 18, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Virtual Program

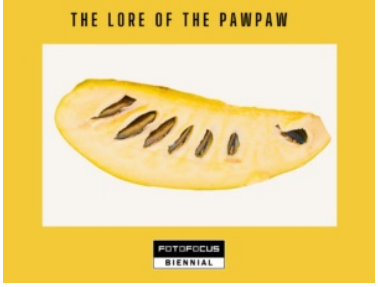

Join art historian Lauren Cannady as she shares her research on the creation and circulation of botanical knowledge in early modern European gardens. While a 2024 Curtis Gates Lloyd Fellow, she came across a manuscript in the Lloyd's collection apparently made on-site at the Jardin du Roi in Paris during the summer of 1708 by a student attending Joseph Pitton de Tournefort's botanical lectures. Cannady's research opens a window into early modern empirical practices, botanical scholarship, and knowledge networks. Registration required.

The Lore of the Pawpaw Opening Reception

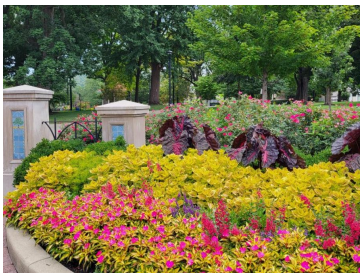

When: Friday, September 27, 5-8 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library

Celebrate the opening of The Lore of the Pawpaw examining the history, presence, and fascination behind Ohio's state native fruit, as the focal point of the Lloyd's 2024 FotoFocus Biennial exhibition. Madeleine Hordinski's lens takes you from pawpaw groves to the science of pawpaws, to the largest celebration of pawpaws in the world! Additionally, Lore examines Ohio's role in the pawpaw's rising global profile. Refreshments. Free and open to the public.

Capturing Native Plants in Washington Park

When: Saturday, October 5
Where: Meet at Lloyd Library, 10 a.m.-noon

Photographer Damon Wilson leads a tour through downtown Cincinnati to visit Washington Park. There, guests will photograph some of the oldest trees in the city and look to the native plants in season for inspiration with camerawork guidance from Wilson. Amateurs are welcome, as are film and digital aficionados alike. Be sure to bring your walking shoes! Registration required.

A Visit to the Lloyd

It's been said many times that the Lloyd is better known outside of Cincinnati than inside it. Look no further for a perfect example of this than Chardae' Stewart, an herbalist from Columbus recently at the Lloyd for research. A graduate of the American College of Healthcare Sciences, Stewart became familiar with the Lloyd through her field, but hadn't yet made a visit. Besides working with our collections, she viewed the Pick Your Poison exhibition and met Executive Director Patricia Van Skaik. However you utilize the Lloyd, we welcome your next (or first) visit!
